

The origins of intersection theory

William Fulton

University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI, U.S.A.

In the 1840's three quite different problems challenged the convention—often attributed to Bezout—that the number of solutions of n polynomial equations in n variables is the product of their degrees. This talk will sketch this early history, with some of the modern approaches to solving such problems.